

I agree.
I admit it.
I'm a long, long way
from perfect.

At one time or another,
I've made nearly the entire state of Alaska mad at me.

Maybe I should consider a personality transplant.

But in Alaska, sometimes it takes a strong will to make things happen.

The Alaskan “dream” of a natural gas pipeline is now closer to reality. It will be a second Prudhoe Bay that can bring billions of dollars to Alaskans each year.

In addition, when approved by the legislature, our current Petroleum Production Tax (PPT) agreement could provide an additional billion dollars a year for Alaskans, beginning now.

And while our gas line negotiations have been in the headlines, we have also quietly strengthened nearly every aspect of Alaska - - particularly K-12 education and the U of A system. Today, over half of Alaska's college-bound students attend the University of Alaska.

And there's a lot more.

Altogether, I believe we're on the right track. And even though I have some areas to improve on, I believe I have the best background to successfully serve Alaska at this important time.

I'd appreciate your support very much.

Thank you,
